

Help me find out about the world around through the different sounds that things make

Sound will help me find out about the world around:

- wherever possible, link sounds to other sensory input...
- through touch, sight or smell
- remember that it may be hard for me to focus on one sound at a time in a noisy environment, so eliminate auditory clutter if you can
- let me hear the same soundmaker in different environments, so I get used to things sounding different in different places
- make recordings of what I hear when out and about, so I can re-live them when I'm back at home or in school
- remember that I may need a lot of repetition of experiences in order for me to grasp them – you'll probably get bored before I do!
